LOUISVILLE GOES DEMOCRATIC.

Republicans Fought Hard But Were out Voted.

Several Members of Legislature all Republicans Seem to Have Saved From Wreck.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 4.—The longest and most fiercely contested political campaign in the history of Louisville closed yesterday with the defeat of practically the entire Republican ticket and the election of the Democrats nominated by Col. John H. Whallen.

The majority of Mr. W. O. Head for Mayor over Mr. James F. Grinstead is exactly 1,721. The majority for the Democratic nominees for Circuit Judge and county officers is several hundred larger.

Owen Tyler cut but little figure in the election, his total vote only slightly exceeding 1,000. George D. Todd cut an absurd figure, polling a vote of less than 100.

County Judge Arthur Peter made the best race of any Republican nominee, but went down with the rest, majority approximating 1,500.

L. H. Francis, Republican, is elected to the Legislature from the Fourth and Fifth wards. Judge S. M. Carson, Republican, is elected to the Legislature from the Tenth ward and R. L. Harris, Republican, seems to have won by a narrow margin in the Eighth and Ninth wards.

All other Democratic nominees for the Legislature, including H. D. Newcomb and Mark Ryan for the State Senate, are elected.

The indications are that Orville J. Stevens, the discoverer of the leopard, is elected Superintendent of the county schools over H. H. Sims and Mrs. Rosa Stonestreet.

All the Whallen nominees for the General Council were, of course elected with W. O. Head by practically the same majority. By common consent this Council, as well as most of the other offices, belong to Col. John H. Whallen to have and to hold until death them do part.

A number of new faces appear upon the Circuit bench. Shackelford Miller, S. B. Kirby and T. R. Gordon are re-elected. Walter P. Lincoln succeeds Matt O'Doherty, W. H. Field succeeds Homer W. Batson, J. P. Gregory succeeds Joseph Pryor and Mulr Weissinger succeeds Arthur Peter.

From beginning to end the registration and election were absolutely fair. The registration was admitted by everybody to have been the fairest and most orderly ever held in Louisville. The election was even more quiet than the registration. Splendid order was manifested at the polls and Mr. Grinstead redeemed every promise made of a fair election. The police did not take the slightest hand in the election and no complaint was made of their conduct anywhere.

An examination of the election returns shows that the city was practically a tie up to the eleventh and twelfth wards. These two wards give Head and the Democratic ticket majorities slightly in excess of 2,000.

GENERAL RESULTS.

The elections held throughout the country last Tuesday resulted in no special party advantage. In Louisville the Democrats elected their entire ticket from Mayor down. While Lexington for the first time went Republican or Fusion, and breaks the Democratic hold on that city which has long been noted for its corruption. Massachusetts elects a Republican Governor by a reduced majority. Little Rhode Island increases her Republican lead, while Virginia remains Democratic. In Philadelphia the effort of the reformers to oust the regular Republican machine failed. Pennsylvania elections generally showed Republican majorities. In Maryland the Constitutional Amendment disfranchising the negro is defeated.

Tom Johnson was defeated for Mayor of Cleveland by a large majority. Indianapolis and Evansville both elected Republican Mayors, changing from Democratic control. In Great New York Tammany succeeded in electing Gaynor Mayor, but lost control of the excise Board, which was more than half a defeat.

COLBURN IS CONVINCED.

Learns by Sad Experience With Tobacco Trust.

Good Price for Tobacco Dumped at Owensboro But Gets Short Weight.

Mr. Charlie Colburn, who lives east of Hartford and who has heretofore been a faithful member of the Society of Equity, yielded to the seductive influences of the Tobacco Trust and one day last week hauled a thousand pound load of tobacco to Owensboro, and sold it at $9, 8 and 2, thinking he had been given a splendid price and probably more than he would get in the pool. However, when his tobacco was weighed, it fell off four hundred pounds on the one load reducing amount received to such an extent that it brought him about $4, 4 and 1, something near the old price paid by the Trust before the pool was originated. Mr. Colburn was in this office one day this week and requested that we give publicity to this transaction together with his acknowledgement of his mistake and a promise to stand by the American Society of Equity in the future. To use Mr. Colburn's own words, "If I ever dump another load of tobacco, it will be in the river." He says that he is hereafter sold for Equity if he can be forgiven, and will stand by the organization until death.

FOR THE BUSY READER.

The will of the late Judge William Lindsay was admitted to probate at Frankfort. The property is divided between Mrs. Lindsay and a daughter by a former marriage.

Acting Gov. Cox pardoned former State Treasurer W. R. Day, under indictment in Perry and Breathitt counties under the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses.

With President Taft, the State fair and a big circus as attractions, 30,000 excursionists were drawn to Jackson, Miss. The President, in his speech, paid tribute to the farmers.

The body of Prince Ito, who was assassinated October 25 by a Korean at Harbin, Manchuria, was received in Tokio last Monday with honors consistent with the distinguished career of the Japanese statesman.

Announcement was made that the immense seawall at Fort Pickens, across the bay from Pensacola, Fla., on Santa Rosa Island, upon which workmen have been engaged for the past two years, has been completed.

R. K. McClure & Co., Frankfort merchants, filed a petition in bankruptcy. Eli H. Brown was named as receiver. The liabilities are estimated at $120,000. The assets are listed as the same, but will hardly realize this amount.

Smallpox cases numbering 24,650 in the United States during the fiscal year ending July 1 last were reported by the public health service at Washington. This aggregate for the year is a decrease of 7,600 from the preceding year.

Wages in Canada.

Canadians living in the maritime provinces of that country recognize how much it would contribute to their prosperity could they have free access to the markets of the United States; but there is no prospect of their receiving such advantage. The wages paid in Prince Edward Island, as officially reported, tell the story. "There was a shortage of labor on the farms the past summer," the report states, "because the young men go to the Far West and to the United States, where better wages are paid. Women labor in the fields, receiving from $6 to $10 per month with board, for 12 hours work. Men, under similar circumstances, get from $15 to $20 per month." The United States workmen do not care to compete with such poorly paid workmen.

WOOD THE RANK- ING OFFICER.

A Few Points on the Career of The Highest Officer in the Army.

Leonard Wood is one of those men who had from his youth had the power in him to get somewhere, and he has got, for the position he occupies in these United States gives him a rank which in the army is next to the president himself. Forty-odd years ago he was born on Cape Cod and when he arrived at the age where a young man begins to cast about for something to do for a living, he decided he would make his by doing what he could to help others to exist long enough to make theirs; so he went to school, took an army examination, and considered that he was lucky to be appointed as an army surgeon. That was in 1885. Just recently he became the ranking officer in the army. Not much had been heard of this man until the Spanish war broke out, but ever since he and Roosevelt headed the Rough Riders, word about him has been going around, and now he is taking salutes off every man in the army.

He didn't get a snap when he entered the army, and it was probably a good thing for him, although he has never shown any inclination to want to sit on velvet things and hold his hands still. Anyhow he went into the wild and woolly Southwest with Lawton's command when they were camping on the trail of the chieftain Geronimo, and when the latter was making snipe hunters out of the whole bunch. However, the wily old fellow's ruses didn't always work, and Lawton got him. Wood was now getting used to things in the rough, and continued to chase the fleeing red man over the plains and up the mountains for some time, until the authorities at Washington thought he had had enough for a while and made him surgeon-general at the nation's capital. But he had become accustomed to activity and when things began to go bughouse for the Spaniards in Cuba, he spent 18 days in getting together a Rough Rider regiment and hiked off for the scene of hostilities.

But when the war was over, it was concluded that Wood might stay on the job in the tropical isle, and instead of fighting Spaniards, he turned to fighting germs. As governor-general he held a firm grip on things, turned Santiago and Havana upside down in his search for malicious microbes, salted the street down with corrosive sublimate, made bugs such unusual things that they had to have a passport to get in town and wound up by discovering through the scientists associated with him that mosquitoes make it a point to load their bills with yellow fever germs whenever they get the chance. The way Wood put those cubes of the fifth and disease that was in them made the Cubans open their eyes and begin to believe that it really was possible to live without being sick all the time. The amount of corrosive sublimate and kerosene he used must have netted a goodly sum to the chemists and the oil companies, but they also proved a perfect dragnet for the nimble germs, and it got so you could open your mouth on the island without catching typhoid or malaria.

But after a while the Americans left Cuba to fight her own battles with bacteria and with herself, and then Wood had a cold to go to the Philippines, which he answered, although some big railroad men offered him a job at $40,000 a year if he would stay at home and occupy a soft seat in New York. But Wood preferred Pulajanes to cosmopolites and Igorrotes to railroad dogs, so he passed on to the Philippines to pacify the Moros and try to make them look as respectable as possible. And he did a good work in the Orient.

Altogether the ranking officer of the army is a fine fellow, and an all around man. He is a fine specimen of physical strength combined with quick perception and keen judgment. He is a better athlete than former President Roosevelt and can turn day and night into two days in which to work any time there is need for it.

In Memory.

Of Mrs. Betty Shields, who departed this life September 2, 1909 aged 63 years.

After an illness of ninety-three days, Mrs. Shields passed from this life to her rest in the grave. All willing hearts and loving hands could do was done, but God knew best. "His will be done, not ours." Her remains were laid to rest in the Green River burying ground, in the presence of a host of friends and relatives. Death is awful at any time under any circumstances, but when the Harvester cuts off one who is the cherished object of love to all who surround her, whose life has been full of gentleness and goodness, free from envy, hatred and malice, whose loss falls as a death blow on loving children, affectionate brothers and sisters, and is most certainly a loss to her many friends. On arriving at the grave scene was most impressive and affecting.

Many eyes were dimmed with tears and many heartsore as the casket with its precious contents was slowly lowered to its final resting place. Soon the gaping pit was filled. Soon each one realized that never again would that bright face glow with friendship upon anyone. But that mysterious instinct of a life beyond the skies gave rise to hope that in some unknown brighter world, where sorrow, partings, sickness and death are unknown, we shall meet aunt Betty there.

Call not back the dear departed. Anchored safe where storms are o'er. On the border land we left her, Soon to meet and part no more.

When we leave this world of changes, When we leave this world of care, We shall meet our missing loved one In our Father's mansion fair.

A precious one from us is gone; A voice we loved is stilled; A place is vacant in her home, Which never can be filled.

God in his wisdom has recalled The boon his love had given; And though her body moulders here Her soul is safe in Heaven.

Weep not, that her toils are over, Weep not that her race is run, God grant that we may rest as calmly When our work; like hers is done.

Till then we yield with gladness, Aunt Betty to him keep, And rejoice in the sweet assurance, He giveth his beloved sleep.

TURNED TOPSY-TURVY BY MIGHTY POWER.

Queer Doings in Oregon House-- Spooks or Electricity Held To Blame

Influenced by an apparently inexplicable power, the contents of a house in Portland, Ore., were for four hours turned topsyturvy from cellar to garret. Furniture, as well as other inanimate objects moved as if they were things of life.

These occurrences were vouched for by hundreds of persons who visited the house, and were witnesses of the phenomena. A six-foot extension table raised itself on two legs and fell on its side; a sofa moved from its place against the wall and careened on its side; a clock on a shelf turned almost completely around and stopped at 3:30 p. m.; dishes on every surface stood on edge and rolled to the floor; a Morris chair fell over; a half-filled tea kettle and coffee pot refused to remain on the cook stove, although placed there repeatedly, and a basket of onions traveled across a drainboard and dropped to the floor, though put back a dozen times. The phenomenon ceased as suddenly as it began.

Various theories have been put forth one being that it was caused by an electrical storm which prevailed yesterday, and another that an unknown potential was energized by an eleven-year-old boy, whose grandparents occupy the premises. This child is declared by one of his relatives to have previously caused articles of great weight to move.—Louisville Post

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo Ohio. Sold by all Druggists 75c. THE INSUR- GENT THREAT.

Contemplates the Ultimate Disso- lution of the Republi- can Party.

Senator Bristow, of Kansas, reinforces Senator Cummins' demand that wherever "reactionaries" are nominated for Congress by the Republicans they are to be defeated at the polls by the "progressives" voting for the "aries" is meant Republican Congressmen who voted for the new Tariff and who stand by the President and the national Republican party. Senator Bristow declares, as did Senator Cummins in his noted Chicago interview that the political obligation rests upon "the people" to enforce the progressive policies. "The progressive," he says, "do not care much about the politics of a Senator or Representative. What they want is the support of the man. So long as they have enough men they do not need parties."

This is Senator Bristow's view, as presented by the Kansas City "Star," an independent journal in sympathy with the insurgent idea. This confirms the "Hawk-Eye's" repeated assertion that the ultimate purpose of the insurgents is the dissolution of the Republican party, unless they can capture its organization and control it. La Follette, Cummins, Bristow and their associates are now putting special emphasis upon "individualism" in politics, disregard of party organization administration and the party caucus. As Bristow puts it: "It is the duty of the people over against the reactionaries now in Congress, no matter to which party they belong." Senator Cummins has publicly proclaimed the same thought and enjoined it as a duty. The threat to defeat the election of Republican candidates to Congress who stand with the party organization carries joy to the Democratic camp. Our political opponents are encouraged to hope for control of the House, the election of the speaker, the appointment of committees, and thus defeat Republican and administration policies.

The "Hawk-Eye" does not believe the people of the United States are ready to bury the Republican party.—Burlington "Hawk-Eye".

CASTORIA For Infants and Children. The Kind You Have Always Bought Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Has the Earth's Climate Ceenged.

The explorations in Central Asia have laid bare the ruins of once flourishing cities. M. Boutquin, in the French journal Ciel et Terre, proves, by historical evidence and modern scientific discoveries, that the abandonment of these regions by the human race was brought about by causes entirely unrelated to such supposed meteorological changes as a general cooling of climates or a progressive desiccation of the globe. In Europe, for example, a sensitive lowering of the temperature and decrease in the precipitation of rain and snow would have caused a well-marked and continuous recession of glaciers, but no such recession is shown by the records more than two thousand years. Helm has proven that, although the latter half of the nineteenth century, they are now far more extensive than they were in the Middle Ages.

Polybius, in the second century B. C., described the rich gold and silver mines of the Tyrol. These mines yielded abundantly until the middle of the sixteenth century, after which date their productiveness rapidly diminished. The mouths of shafts became covered with ice. A shaft sunk at this epoch was covered in 1570 by a glacier 65 feet thick. Resistance to the invasion of the ice soon became impossible. In the eighteenth century the glacier was more than 300 feet high, and in 1875 it had attained a height of 460 feet.

For many years it was asserted that the east coast of Greenland had formerly enjoyed a mild climate, which favored the growth of vegetation and gave rise to the name Greenland. The historical researches of Rink and Von Maurer, however, have proved that the decay of the posts established by the Norwegians in olden times was caused by the introduction of a contagious disease and by the adoption, by the Norwegian government, of an unwise economic policy, which provoked hostile attacks by the Eskimos. Equally erroneous statements have been made in regard to Iceland.

In the British Isles, the cultivation farther north than it does at present simply because it was then, in the absence of foreign competition, more profitable than it is now. Yet it has been very difficult to gain acceptance for this elementary truth; the popular belief in a change of season or climate for a long time prevailed over all evidence.

In Belgium and other countries, also, agriculture has been radically transformed by the operation of economical laws, improved methods of culture and a more intelligent choice of crops. In the middle Ages and until the fifteenth century the vine was cultivated in Bavaria and in other parts of Germany from which it has now almost entirely disappeared but its disappearance is not due to climate changes. The wine produced in these districts was generally of inferior quality and, with the growing refinement of taste, it was gradually supplanted by foreign wines and good native beer.

The culture of the vine has practically disappeared from Belgium for similar reasons. Two Belgium abbeys still possess vineyards and make wine for sacramental use. In France, it has proved that the vintage season has not shifted appreciably since the fourteenth century. It has likewise been demonstrated that, contrary to the popular belief, the olive was never cultivated in Switzerland except to a very small extent in gardens and that no change has occurred in Swiss agriculture products in general.—Cosmos.

Trees Brought Rain.

In lower Egypt rain fell very seldom. During the French occupation about 1789, it did not rain for 16 months, but since Mahomet Ali and Ibrahim Pasha completed their vast plantations—the former alone planted more than 20,000,000 olive, fir, cotton, acacia, plane trees, etc.—there now falls a good deal of rain.

A Sunday Afternoon.

In an upper west side street, whose residents like quiet and decorum, and where—probably for the same reason the children of a near-by tenement dearly love to gather, there is a stoop which is the object of their special and fostering care.

It is a Sunday afternoon and theurchins are forthgathered in great numbers, big and little, but they sprawl upon the steps of a stoop to which they have no right, and in such lordly, authoritative fashion that the real occupants hesitate about mounting to the door.

On this Sunday afternoon they have been driven once, twice, from the premises, and now they are back again infesting every inch of space between side-walk and door bell.

Out comes a lily avenger, Courtsey having availed nothing, she swoops down upon them: "Get off, every one you—what do you mean?"

Not an urchin moves. "Get off!" she says again, seizing two children calmly seated on the hand rail, and as they make no move, "You little devils!" she screams.

This hits pretty hard, one of the boys on the curb, evidently the ringleader of the camping party. "Devils!" he echoes haughtily.

"Yes—devils!" she retorts angrily. "You ought to be ashamed of yourselves to annoy people so!"

For a moment the boy looks dazed at the woman. Then he grasps by the collar a very, very small boy, who submits without a word and yells "You come on here, you jackass, you!" and the procession moves off and down the street under the direction of its leader.

Stops Lameness

Much of the chronic lameness in horses is due to neglect.

See that your horse is not allowed to go lame. Keep Sloan's Liniment on hand and apply at the first sign of stiffness. It's wonderfully penetrating—goes right to the spot—relieves the soreness—limbers up the joints and makes the muscles elastic and pliant.

Here's the Proof.

Mr. G. T. Roberts of Resaca, Ga., R.F.D. No. 1, Box 43 writes:—"I have used your Liniment on a horse forweeney and effected a thorough cure. I also removed a spavin on a mule. This spavin was as large as a guinea egg. In my estimation the best remedy for lameness and soreness is

Sloan's Liniment

Mr. H. M. Gibbs, of Lawrence, Kans., R.F.D. No. 3, writes:—"Your Liniment is the best that I have ever used. I had a mare with an abscess on her neck and one yoc. bottle of Sloan's Liniment entirely cured her. I keep it around all the time for galls and small swellings and for everything about the stock."

Sloan's Liniment will kill a spavin, curb or splint, reduce wind puffs and swollen joints, and is a sure and speedy remedy for fistula, wweeney, founder and thrush.

CARRIES OUT THE PARTY PLEDGE.

It Was a Protective Tariff that The People Voted for Last November.

The things which Mr. Taft said in his speech in Winona about the Tariff are just what ought to have been expected, but he said them with a little more emphasis and decisiveness than had been looked for. When he signed the bill he said that it did not suit him in every particular, but he declared that it was the best bill which could be obtained from Congress and after therefore ought to be placed on the statute book. At Winona he cited one or two items in which he objected, particularly some portions of the whole schedule, but he did not believe that the duties would increase the prices of woolsen clothes. By the use of a table which had been prepared by the Ways and Means Committee he pointed out that the general direction of the changes in the Tariff was downward. The decrease in the duties touch goods which in the previous year, were imported to the extent of $4,674,000,000, while the increases in duties affected imports of more than four times the extent of the expansions. After looking at the measure calmly in the five weeks which have passed since its enactment, Mr. Taft declares that he believes it to be the best Tariff which the Republican party ever passed, and therefore the best which the country has ever seen.

After all the uncertainty which the country had between the Republican promise of revision in June, 1908, and the enactment of that revision in August, 1909, industry is entitled to a rest for a few years from further Tariff alterations. Let us give the new law a fair test, before we think of making changes in it. No test can be fair unless it extends through several years.

Business responded to the enactment of the Payne law by making a long step forward, and there has been a steady advance ever since. If there were serious belief of further changes in the schedules in the session this year, or in the session which opens a year later, the advance would be checked, and that trade activity which the country wants, and which promises to appear before the end of 1909, would be postponed.

As it stands, the new law may be said to carry out the pledge of the platform of 1908. It was a protective Tariff that the people, by a plurality 1,250,000, voted for last November. That is the sort of a Tariff which has been placed on the books. If the people had wanted a Tariff without any protection in it they would have elected Mr. Bryan and a Democratic House of Representatives.

Mr. Bryan says his party will make the Tariff an issue in the campaign of 1910, but he is mistaken. He himself may talk about it, but as his party split on that question near the middle of Congress, and there is a feud upon it between Messrs. Bailey and Bryan now, with Messrs. Stone, Daniel McEnery and many other Democrats supporting Bailey, the Democratic can make no fight in 1910 or 1912 on the Tariff unless it is a fight in its own ranks. The party unless it is a fight in its own ranks. The party unity to which small differences of opinion must conform demands that the Republican line be kept intact in the campaign which is only a year ahead of us. The country's credit and prosperity depend on the election of a Republican House of Representatives in 1910. Many live issues are before the country and the Republican party is the only organization which is capable of dealing with those questions courageously and intelligently.—St. Louis "Globe-Democrat."

Abandoned Farms. Of interest to the farmers of Ohio county will be a report on soil conditions in the Eastern and Southern section which has just been issued by the Department of Agriculture. M. E. Carr of the Bureau of Soils has just completed a survey of soils in this section and he deals with the management of farms and the problems confronting farmers.

The district covered by this report comprises the section through which for twenty-five years there has been a steady decrease in the farm population and a marked decrease in the value of the farm lands and improvements. The report shows conclusively that these changes are not due to any necessary deterioration in the crop-producing power of the soils, but has been brought about by changes in the economic conditions surrounding that section, and principally by the steady drift of the farming population toward the city employment and city pleasures.

It contrasts sharply the deserted, abandoned farms of each community with other farms, frequently within sight, which are well tilled, well cared for and are furnishing their owners not only a good rate of interest on the capital investment, but also a good living and good wages for the time expended in the cultivation of the land.

The report analyzes the agricultural conditions of the section and makes suggestions from the experience of practical, successful farmers in meeting the conditions which have been thrust upon the agricultural hill country of Western New York, Northern Pennsylvania and Northeastern Ohio. The conditions and proper remedies are briefly summarized as follows:

The soils of the Volusia series are not "worn out" in any proper sense of the word, but so far as the mineral matter of the soil is concerned are abundantly supplied with the plant food elements for the production of good crops. The difficulties encountered in crop production upon the Volusia soils arise chiefly from lack of drainage, poor physical condition and a depletion of organic matter.

The proper management and tilling of these soils require tile drainage drainage over considerable areas of the more clayey soil types, plowing to depths varying with the character of crop to be planted and the existence or nonexistence of hard pan, plowing only when both surface soil and subsoil are sufficiently dry to prevent puddling, the addition of organic matter in form of stable manure or green crops plowed under and the application of lime, particularly on the Volusia silt loam prior to seeding down to grass, especially to clover.

The soils of the Volusia series are well suited to dairying; stock raising and sheep raising, which should be undertaken both for the sake of profit and for the sake of the soil. Irish potatoes can be advantageously produced on the Volusia silt loam and Volusia loam and constitute the best "money crops" to supplement the animal industry.

The so-called clover sickness" through the region occupied by the Volusia soils is a problem and not a plant problem. To secure good stand of red clover on the soils of this series through drainage, good mechanical preparation of the land, the application of stable manure and the application of lime at the rate of about 2000 pounds to the acre are required.

When corn cannot be grown for grain production at the highest elevations, silage corn can be produced at all elevations on all types of the series. Where grain can not be produced to advantage, Canada field peas can be sown as a substitute.

Apple orcharding on a commercial scale is practicable on well-drained areas of the Volusia loam and Volusia stony loam and over a considerable portion of the Volusia silt loam in situations with favorable climate conditions. These soils constitute some of the cheapest farm lands now in the market in the United States, and their selling price in the majority of cases is below their agricultural value.

SOCIALIST VIEW ON TRUST QUESTION.

What the Appeal to Reason Thinks of the Tobacco Situation in Kentucky.

This is rich. The tobacco trust, a criminal organization, a convict felon, has sued the tobacco raisers of Kentucky for $135,000, damages, alleging that the Burley Society is a conspiracy in restraint of trade, in that the trust was forced to buy tobacco at 18 cents a pound when it was worth only 8c. The Sherman anti-trust law that was alleged to have been framed to prevent the organization of capitalist trust, is the club being used and doubtless the federal judges will grant the judgment. Why to arrest the tobacco trust for selling its tobacco at 50c when it is worth only 8c according to its own petition? But the law does not work that way. It works only against the useful member of society. Why was the trust forced to buy the tobacco? Who forced it? Under what statutes was it compelled to pay more than it was worth 17c could have let the tobacco alone and gone out of business. When the work people demanded more bread for their toil and quit work rather than starve working, the law never helps them—except to help them off the earth via the bullet route, as in the Homestead and McKee's riots. Wonder if the tobacco raisers will ever get wise enough to elect men to run the State of Kentucky who will have the State erect the tobacco factories and manufacture their products into market shape? If they do not, then they deserve to have the continual squabbles with the trust—and they will have them, all right. The interests of the trust and the interests of the tobacco raisers are diametrically opposed and never can be harmonized. It means a warfare until one or the other is destroyed. Which should prevail—the interests of the hundreds of thousands of tobacco farmers or the interests of the small group of corporation owners who have conspired to rob the producer of tobacco on one hand and the consuming public on the other. It is up to the men who have votes. Until they are intelligent enough to use them they are going to be beaten. Ignorance never did control intelligence—and never will.—Appeal to Reason.

"She gives me a clean handkerchief," whereupon he produced the prescribed "remedy."—Delineator.

Woman's Home Companion for November 1909.

The city of Pittsburgh, the life of an actress, the franchise for women in Denver, all these are most entertainingly discussed in the WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION for November.

Special investigators who have gone to live in Pittsburgh, and who have had rare opportunities to observe its social life, say that "Pittsburgh may be likened to a huge pie, with upper and lower crust a-plenty, but a noticeable lack of what the good housewife realizes is the chief feature—the filling."

As for the stage, the actress who tells her story here has found that twenty pounds of weight and a good digestion are but two of the things she paid for her experience.

But women will no doubt still venture on the stage—just as women will still struggle for the ballot—in spite of the fact that in Denver (according to an article by a Denver woman politician in this issue) the much-prized privilege has crumbled to dust in their hands.

These women especially will be interested in the story of a club-woman who resigned abruptly from all clubs and will never go near them again.

Yes, women will continue to venture—and successfully—as witness the experience of Lillian Todd, the first woman to build an aeroplane, who tells her remarkable story in this month's WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION.

A very different woman is Queen Elena, ideal mother, whose story is told by Kellogg Durland.

A new detective story by Anna Katharine Green in this issue begins well. There are stories also by Kate Douglas Wiggin, Alice Brown and many others. And there is another chapter of Edward Everett Hale's popular reminiscences.

So much for pure entertainment. For practical use there are the sixteen regular department. Especially interesting are the two for mothers. Fashions in furs, an article on ham-broth, "A Three-Tousand-Dollar House," are a few of the interesting, useful subjects covered.

Won't Slight a Good Friend. "If ever I need a cough medicine again I know what to get," declares Mrs. A. L. Fish to Fight Mosquitoes.

They are going to make fish do a large part of the mosquito fighting on the isthmus in the future. The Canal Commission has received a lot of mosquito killing fish from the Island of Barbados in the West Indies and is going to begin a systematic planting of the species within the Canal Zone. The fish have been placed temporarily in the tank in the court of the administration building at Ancon.

The freedom of Barbados from malaria has been attributed to the presence of these fish in large numbers in the streams and lakes of the island. The fish are known commonly as millions, and their scientific name is Girardinus poecilioides. They belong to a group known as top minnows, so called because they always feed near the surface of the water.

They are never more than an inch and a half long and they go scooting through the water with most of their backs exposed. This enables them to pursue bugs over lily pads and other vegetation covered only by a thin film of water. They aren't at all fastidious about their home. They will live in stagnant, sluggish or running water, and they aren't particular whether it is fresh or brackish.

Mosquito larvae are the food these millions hanker for, and when they can't get a nice little broiler mosquito they will fasten on an old tough one in preference to common food like water bugs. They have to catch the old mosquitoes on the fly though, and their real usefulness is based chiefly on their destruction of the larvae.

Once planted in a stream they multiply with great rapidity. They young are born alive, not hatched from an egg. The minnows ascend streams against a swift current and spread into the smallest rivulets from the big stream.

There are already some mosquito-eating fish in Panama waters, but the introduction of millions is going to be a great re-enforcement to the schools of destroyers. Of course while the millions surely will be bad medicine for the anopheles mosquitoes they won't be able to touch the stegomyia, the really select mosquito that breed in exclusive places like cistern, cain barrels and old tomato cans.—Washing Post.

"I dreamed last night that beginning with $100 I pyramided my bets on the stock market so that in a little while I had $2,000,000,000," said one of the artist colony yesterday. "A crowd of people came to me and besought me to cease speculating. They pointed out that I had more money than I could ever spend and that if I kept on I would own all the money in the world. I replied that I wanted $1,000,000,000 more for my own use and that I proposed with the $2,000,000,000 I already had to establish a great institution where all the artists and writers and sculptors might work, free from pecuniary annoyances and raise the standard of beauty in all the arts throughout the world. FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 5.

Even Butler county got shaky.
Who said Judge Wedding would be defeated?

McHenry and North Rockport precincts also did their duty nobly.

We presume that $500 check tendered by Dr. Bruner was not covered.

Now let every one bend his energies towards the upbuilding of Ohio county.

Louisville will get more than enough of John Whalen before the end of four years.

East Hartford precinct is the banner Republican precinct in Ohio county, according to returns from Tuesday's election.

Christian and Mendenburg counties seem to have deserted the Republican party. However, we hope it is only temporary.

Grayson county Republicans can carry their county in State and National elections, but that is about all which can be said for them.

It has always been claimed that a bright day indicated Democratic victory, but that old saying did not prove true in Ohio county Tuesday.

The people did not generally understand the proposed Constitutional amendment. Many thought that if they voted for it they were voting additional taxes.

Ohio county has no one on the list of "pie eaters" under the present Republican State administration, but she always sends a Republican Representative to Frankfort. The appointments are reserved for those counties which cannot elect Republican county officers.

The election last Tuesday passed off quietly in Ohio County, and the predictions made by this paper in its last issue were fully verified in almost every particular. The campaign was dull and lifeless from the very beginning, and because of some early dissatisfaction, or soreness resulting from the Republican primary, which was always magnified the Democrats thought they had a chance to overcome the Republican majority and elect at least part of their ticket. In this they were disappointed as the county has shown itself resolved to stand true to the Republican principles. This is exceedingly gratifying to the Republican leaders as well as the rank and file in Ohio county, especially in view of the fact that in nearly every instance Republicans fell down in the surrounding counties. Great credit is due every member of the Republican ticket for the splendid personal work done during the campaign, and the campaign committee and the organization generally throughout the county.

Trying to Make a Swap.

President Taft has wandered as far from the economic teachings of Morrill and Kelley as Senator Bailey has from the preachments of Albert Gallatin and Roger Q. Mills. The President recommends free raw materials. That means Tariff for revenue only, swift and sure, on the finished product. The Senator demands taxed raw materials. That means perennial Protective duties on the finished product. That is why Senator Aldrich was so diligent in impressing on the Democratic side of the Senate that he was as much in favor of Protection for Southern raw materials as he was for Protection for New England finished products. Are the two parties on Jockey street trying to make a swap? It looks that way.—Washington "Post."

Must Have Our Raw Cotton.

According to trustworthy statistics for the year ending with August the world's consumption of cotton was 16,667,400 bales, an increase of 1,758,200 bales over the year 1906-7. Of that quantity the United States supplied 12,983,300 bales, which shows how absurd is the talk in France and Germany about excluding all American products. Both countries get nearly all their raw cotton and many other raw products from the United States, and they could not exclude them without great loss to their own people, and then they would have to buy cotton goods and other raw material manufactured from competing nations. If either country undertakes to force a Tariff war, because the United States at last demands to be treated as well as other nations, this country can await results with equanimity. But there is not the slightest probability that any country will precipitate Tariff hostilities.

Enforcing the Law.

Defrauding the revenue by bribing serious statutory crime, but there are many who do not realize that the loss to the revenue is the smallest part of the injury inflicted. Its effect is to give the thief such advantage over honest men as to tend to drive honest men out of business and place all the importing business in the hands of swindlers. Under a Protective Tariff the duties paid are no unimportant part of the cost of the imported commodity, and the importer who habitually evades a great part of the duty can not only undersell competing importers, but can make it impossible for domestic goods of the same character to compete. The greater part of the changes made in the new Tariff act have had for their object the prevention of frauds in the revenue and to the injury of honest competition, and so far as there is increase in Tariff rates, it will be largely in the actual collection of the duties intended to be imposed by the Dingley act. Most of the fraud said just now to be brought to light are cases in which the duty, like that on sugar, is imposed on weight. Obviously the raw way of bribing the Custom-house weighers is the easy way to evade duties, but it is also more easily detected when suspicion is aroused. From the statements made it would seem that the majority of the weighers of the New York Customhouse must have been in receipt of regular bribes.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Shoes Higher, Spite of Free Hides.

The New York "Times" prints and the Davenport "Democrat" reprints an article on the increased price of shoe and leather goods. The article says that a great many people are wondering that, with the duty on hides removed in the new Tariff "the price of prepared leather is advancing instead of falling." The article then proceeds to say that the Tariff has nothing to do with the matter, that it is solely one of supply and demand and at the present time the demand exceeds the supply.

The truth that has thus been revealed in the case of leather and shoe was often pointed out by those who were opposed to the removal of the duty. Their predictions that the cost of shoes would not be lowered is coming true and it is coming true much sooner than they had expected. The shoe manufacturers who lobbied that "reform" through Congress persistently promised the people cheaper shoes, but instead of cheaper shoes we are to have higher shoes. In the meantime the Government is losing much revenue by the removal of the duty.

The country was simply bunched on this free hide question. But it is worth something as an answer to those who are insisting that the higher prices we meet with in so many directions are due to the Tariff. Here we have hides absolutely free, the competition of the world is ours, and yet prices in this particular line are going up, not coming down.—Cedar Rapids "Republican".

ROCKPORT.

Rockport, Ky., Nov. 3.—Rockport has elected an able set of town officials. Judge L. Reid, the peoples choice received a landslide and E. T. Williams was elected city Marshall by a handsome majority. An excellent set of town trustees was elected and the Republican Candidates for county offices all received majorities.

Miss Oma Maddox, a popular young lady of Smallhouse, has accepted a position in the Rockport post-office as assistant clerk. Miss Maddox is well known in this city where she has many friends.

The election passed off without any serious trouble here. There was evidence of much "booze" and a good many drunken men were in evidence. The Boswell Hotel on main street was attacked by unknown parties late Saturday night and badly wrecked. Two or three of the large plate windows were demolished by bricks thrown by the night prowlers, much damage being done. The building is owned by the Rockport Deposit Bank and is run by Mrs. Mattie Boswell. There is much bad feeling existing between the hotel and the citizens of Rockport, and it is feared that more trouble will result. The names of 62 young men and boys have been secured by the hotel people and warrants will be sworn out. More trouble is feared.

On account of the rain, the dedication of the new Methodist church at Rosine, was postponed from Oct. 10th, to Sunday, Nov. 14th. Dinner will be served on the ground. Everybody is invited to come.

LABOR LEADERS LOSE APPEAL

Will Try Higher Court for Relief.

Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison May be Compelled to Serve Jail Sentences.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2.—In an opinion, sweeping in its terms, the court of appeals of the District of Columbia today affirmed the judgment of Justice Wright, of the Supreme court of the District of Columbia, in imposing jail sentences on President Gompers, Vice President Mitchell and Secretary Morrison, of the American Federation of Labor, for contempt of court in violating the injunction in the Bucks stove and range case. These sentences were:

Gompers, one year.
Mitchell, nine months.
Morrison, six months.

The opinion was rendered by Associate Justice Vanarsdel, and concurred in by Justice Robb. Chief Justice Shepard dissented.

The case decided today grew out of the action of the Federation of Labor in placing the Bucks Stove and Range company, of St. Louis, on the "we do not patronize" list in the monthly official organ of the federation, following the failure to adjust the dispute between the Metal Polishers union and the Bucks company in March, 1907.

Justice Van Arsdel emphatically states his belief "that the acts charged were committed by the defendants for the express purpose of qualifying the order of the court, in the belief that they were technically avoiding the charge of contempt." He carefully avoids any references to the plea of the labor leaders that convictions of contempt in the case constituted an abridgement of their constitutional right of free speech and a free press.

MRS. KISSINGER COMMITS SUICIDE.

Left Note Indicating Unhappy Married Life as the Cause.

Growing tired of the trials of life, and becoming despondent, Mrs. Ethel Kissinger, the wife of Roy Kissinger, of the Whitesville neighborhood, committed suicide Sunday evening by swallowing a quantity of strychnine. Before taking her life with her own hands, Mrs. Kissinger left a note setting forth why she committed the deed and instructions as to what disposition to make of her body.

While in the sitting room of the Kissinger home, on the farm of W. B. Wells, where Kissinger was a tenant, just a few minutes before taking her life, Mrs. Kissinger seemed to be in the best of spirits and was talking with friends on various topics. Arising from her chair she went to the kitchen to prepare supper, and had almost completed preparations for the serving of the meal when she left the house and went out into the yard, where she swallowed the poison. She left the house without being noticed and would probably have died in the open air without anyone knowing it but for a small boy who was visiting at the Kissinger home. The youngster was playing in the yard and started to the house when he found the prostrate form of Mrs. Kissinger lying under a tree near the kitchen door. He immediately spread the alarm and the occupants of the house rushed to the side of the woman.

Immediately upon finding that the woman had taken poison some of the members of the family summoned Dr. Carter of Whitesville, but upon his arrival she was dead.

Mrs. Kissinger was married to Roy Kissinger about four months ago. She was before her marriage, Miss Ethel Teal, the daughter of J. Y. Teal, deceased and was raised in Whitesville. She was only 20 years of age. Before her marriage she was very popular with the young people and until recently her married life was thought to be a happy one.

She was a hard working young woman and aided her husband materially in the work in the field and never showed signs of despondency, only to a few relatives.

The following note was found on the young woman's person which shows that the suicide was premeditated, and due preparations had been made by her.

"Whitesville, Ky., Oct. 31, 1909.—Dear Friends: I did this because I can't see any peace here for Roy. We can't live together, so I will go to peace or torment, and some of my kinfolks will know the rest of my trouble. When you find this please send for Effie and Anna. I bid you farewell. I want to make peace. I have nothing against anyone on earth. I have nothing against my husband, and I want everyone to know it."

"ETHEL KISSINGER.

"P. S. Please send this to Effie when it has been found. I want to be placed in my father's lot in the Whitesville cemetery."

Coroner Allen of Ohio county, was summoned and held an inquest over the body. The coroner's jury returned a verdict to the effect that the deceased came to her death by voluntarily taking strychnine.

It is now pretty well settled that the L. & N. Railroad Company will operate the new line, instead of the L. H. & St. L. Company. The ballasting crew has reached a point about a mile this side of Centertown and work is progressing well on the new depot and section houses.

Last Friday night the boys of Hartford celebrated Halloween in the usual way by wiring gates and tearing up bridges on the various side walks and by numerous other pranks. It is all right for the boys to have their fun, but at times they forget themselves in their enthusiasm and destroy property as they did in several instances on this occasion. The tearing out bridges and stringing wires across the side walks should be stopped. If a fire had occurred in town last Saturday morning after the street lights were out many of our citizens would doubtless have been crippled or maimed in the run to the fire which they always so gallantly make with no thought for personal sacrifice, whenever the fire alarm is given, and hundreds of men would have been thrown into these open places where bridges had been removed or would have fallen over wires and it would have been a miracle if a number had not been killed. Boys, you should think of this, for it might be your own home to which these people would be hurrying to save from the flames.

Murphy-Acton.

Mr. Porter Murphy, of Cone, New Mexico, and Miss Cliffla Acton were quietly married at the home of Rev. Hugh O'Sullivan, at Whitesville, Wednesday, Oct., 27th, 1909. At twelve o'clock.

Only the brother and sister-in-law of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Acton, witnessed the wedding. On returning to the home of the bride quite a number of friends greeted the young couple, and after many congratulations an elaborate supper was served. The dining room being beautifully decorated with chrysanthemums and evergreens.

The bride was tastefully attired in a costume of London smoke. The groom wore a handsome suit of black.

The groom is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Murphy, and is a prominent young man. The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Acton and is one of the charming young ladies of Ohio co.

After a short stay with friends and relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Murphy, will leave for their home in New Mexico. Their friends are numbered by their acquaintances, all of whom wish them a life full of happiness and joy.

C. C. Wedding Married.

Mr. C. C. Wedding, of Indianapolis, Ind., and Miss Eva Vandetta Curtis were married at the home of the bride's cousin, Charles Tindall, in Shelbyville, Ky., the 25th day of last May. The marriage was kept secret until a few days ago, only a few friends being present at the wedding.

Mr. Wedding is a son of County Judge-elect, R. R. Wedding and was born and raised in Ohio county. He is now a prosperous broker with an in the Board of Trade Building, at Indianapolis. The bride is a beautiful young lady of culture and refinement. They have just returned home in Indianapolis, after an extended tour in the east. The many friends of Mr. Wedding in Ohio County, wish him abundance of success as a benedict.

PERRY RECORDS INSUFFICIENT.

To Prove That he Reached the North Pole.

Committee Calls on Commander For all His Proofs and Instruments.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 31.—The committee appointed by the National Geographic Society to pass upon the claim of Commander Robert E. Peary that he reached the north pole, considered the data he already has furnished as insufficient to make a thorough examination and has called upon him to produce all records and instruments in his possession. Peary has notified the committee that he will comply with its request, and the complete data, with the instruments, are looked for in a day or two. It is possible Peary will bring them himself.

The Investigation Committee of the Geographic Society, consisting of Henry Gannett, chief of the geographical division of the Geological Survey; Rear Admiral C. F. Chester, of the navy, and Otto P. Tittman, Superintendent of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, was appointed several weeks ago to examine the claims of both Commander Peary and Dr. Cook as to their respective discoveries of the pole, and it was announced soon afterward that Peary had placed in its hands the proof of his exploit. However, when Mr. Gannett and Admiral Chester looked it over, they found it incomplete. Instead of the "apple pie" order and scientific accuracy always claimed for Peary by his ardent friends, the committee were not able to tell whether the explorer had been further north than Etah.

On account of the insufficiency of the records submitted, Chairman Gannett did not see fit to call a meeting of the entire committee. Mr. Tittman has not even had a glance at the records which Peary sent.

Chairman Gannett and Admiral Chester refused to-day to make any comments on the call that has been sent to the explorer. Mr. Gannett denied that he had sent for Peary. The records alone are all the committee needs, providing those records are accurately and scientifically kept.

Keown-Elgin.

The marriage of Miss Mary Gilmore Keown to Mr. Virgil Clayton Elgin was impressively solemnized Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. Virgil Elgin, father of the groom and pastor of the M. E. Church, South, officiated.

Only the relatives and a very few intimate friends were present to witness the ceremony. Immediately after the ceremony and congratulations the young couple departed for Beaver Dam, where they left for a short trip to Hopkinsville and Christian county, and will be at home to their friends in Hartford, on their return.

The bride, the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Keown, is one of our "first ladies," being a graduate of Hartford College, and one of the best music instructors in the county, and is quiet attractive and popular.

The groom is the son of Rev. and Mrs. Virgil Elgin, and is a young man of excellent business qualities, stands high socially and the marriage is decidedly a happy affair.

The many friends of the young couple extend congratulations and wish them a full share of happiness in life.

A BIT OF SLANG.

Origin of "Making a Noise Like" This or That.

Captain Henry G. Lyon, U. S. A., was the innocent cause of the slang expression about "making a noise like" this or that. At Peekskill in 1906 he gave instruction to officers of the New York national guard doing duty in that town of camp. The first day he formed the officers into a class in the big mess hall, which was open at the sides, so that all that went on inside was seen and heard by the enlisted men passing back and forth. In teaching the officers how to give the commands Captain Lyon impressed upon the class the necessity of clear enunciation and of making commands like an officer, saying "arms," not "umps," etc.

The private's capacity for turning things to their own amusement was shown a few minutes after that first class was dismissed, for officers going through their company streets heard private in front of a group of men shouting out, "Make a noise like an officer!" whereupon the entire "class" would roar "Umps!" A reporter sent an account to a New York paper, and from this grew expressions such as "Make a noise like a hoop and roll away," etc.

However, it is seldom one hears the word "arms" or "march," the voice finding it much easier to slur the word till it may mean anything, and as the preparatory command indicates what is to be done the command following is merely a signal for the execution of what has already been specified.—Army and Navy Journal.

LEGAL ADVICE.

The Lawyer's Duty in Giving Counsel to His Client.

In the realm of advice a lawyer may choose between counseling his client how to uphold the rights secured to him by the justice of his cause or how to obtain benefits from the application of technicalities and the use of the weaknesses of the particular statute or precedents under consideration whereby he may attain advantages inconsistent with fair play between man and man.

Every time a lawyer encourages such an application of the law as, resulting in injustice, casts disrepute upon the law or its administration he is plainly promoting discord either in the present or the future.

Every time a lawyer counsels controversy for the establishment of a right as recognized by existing law or for the promulgation of new law beneficial to the majority of society he is exercising his true function, and the charge which he lays upon his individual client and through him upon industry and progress in the mass, if reasonable in amount, is well earned and should be cheerfully paid.

When, however, a lawyer gives the other kind of advice the expense, perhaps cheerfully borne by the client who profits personally therefrom, must be finally laid upon society as a whole, which is thereby paying for its own injury and naturally resents the charge.—Donald R. Richberg in Atlantic.

Sitting on the Snakes.

"While in Paris last summer another girl and I went out to Versailles one afternoon," said a schoolteacher, "it was dusk when we reached the railway station, and, as there was no waiting room, we sat down on two crates that were out on the platform among a lot of others. We noticed that the station employees kept staring at us with a persistence that was annoying. Presently a man in a shabby uniform with a bucket on his arm approached us. He touched his cap deferentially and said in French, of course:

"Mesdames, pray do not let me disturb you, but I am forced to open the boxes on which you are seated in order to feed the bon constricteur and other serpents that are within."

"When we recovered from our fright we found we had been seated in the midst of a huge collection of snakes that had just arrived from their native jungles en route for the zoo near Versailles."—Exchange.

Letter Perfect and Looked the Part.

An amateur theatrical company was recently arranging for the performance of a play which contained a rich variety of characters, says London Sketch. Owing to this fact little progress was made with the cast, a few members of the company making a dead set at principal positions, while minor characters were going begging.

One rather vacuous looking youth made himself particularly obstructive and brought down the wrath of a brother artist.

"In my opinion," exclaimed the latter, "young Jones must, in the interests of economy, take the part of Simkins the Fool."

"Why economy?" demanded Mr. Jones indignantly.

"Well, you see, my dear fellow," was the quiet reply, "you won't need any touching up."

The Sacrifice.

"A Kentucky couple," said Mrs. Simpkins, "got married a few days ago after a courtship which had lasted fifty years."

"I suppose," replied Mr. Simpkins, "the poor old man had become too feeble to hold out any longer."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Doesn't Work.

"Cheerfulness is riches." "Oh, no! If you can't pay a bill, being cheerful about it only makes the other man madder."—Detroit Free Press.

What a Poet Writes.

"You never can tell whether poetry is loaded or not," said a Columbia professor descending upon the muse, "and what a poet writes in the moments of his fine frenzy rolling may be susceptible of changes which would make him curse the pen did he but know whence it pointed. Now, listen to this couplet:

"Help us to save free conscience from the paw Of hireling wolves whose gospel is their maw."

"It sounds like some kind of a family poem, doesn't it, with paw and maw coming in to make the rhyme? Do you imagine the poet when he wrote the lines ever thought of the parents represented in such a homely way and how the meaning of the whole thing could be changed by changing the meaning of the end words of two lines? Was he a beginner? Oh, no; he was not a beginner. He had written several very classy things. He was John Milton. You remember he wrote 'Paradise Lost' and two or three other pieces of considerable merit, though he never quite got into the 'six best sellers' list, and these two lines I have quoted close his sonnet to Lord Protector Cromwell, written in 1652."—New York Herald.

The Southerner and Corn.

The southerner feeds himself, his pigs and his progeny upon corn. He slept in his frontiersman's cabin upon a mattress made of the husks. Today he contributes some of its pith to the manufacture of gun cotton with which to blow the enemy to Beezebub and some more of it to the manufacture of cellulose to pack behind the armor of his country's battleships to prevent them from sinking when projectiles pierce their plates. He plants corn as early in the springtime as the season will permit and gets up at dawn to go into the fields and tickle its spreading roots with a double shovel plow. In midwinter he smokes his corn-cob pipe before a corn-cob fire. Looking into a bed of glowing embers through a blue haze of the smoke of incense burned to Mondamin, he returns thanks for the cornmeal in the cupboard and dreams happily of the "ros'n ear" of the golden summer to come. His appreciation of the value of Indian corn is high. His affection for it in its various forms is abiding.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Argyll and Longfellow.

The great Duke of Argyll was visiting his son, then governor general of Canada, and met Longfellow in the American poet's ancient colonial mansion at Cambridge, Mass. As they sat together on the veranda the duke persistently asked the names of the various birds he saw and heard singing in the poet's trees as well as of the flowers and bushes growing in his extensive and beautiful garden. Longfellow was neither botanist nor ornithologist and did not know.

"I was surprised to find your Longfellow such an ignorant person," said the duke subsequently to an American acquaintance.

"Indeed! Pray, on what subject?"

"Why, he could not tell me the names of the birds and flowers to be heard and seen in his own garden."

"May I ask how many languages you speak?" the American asked.

"Certainly—but one."

"Mr. Longfellow," was the answer, "speaks six and translates freely from almost all the languages of Europe."

Rise of Russia.

In the history of Europe down to the middle of the eighteenth century Russia is a blank. The foundation of the kingdom was laid by Rurik the Norseman in the ninth century. In the tenth century the Russians were Christianized, adopting the Greek form of Christianity. In the thirteenth century the Russians were completely overrun by the Tartars under Garghiz Khan. From the Tartars Russia was delivered by Ivan, who became czar in the time of Elizabeth. It was Peter the Great (1672-1725) who gave Russia for the first time a place in the states system of Europe.—New York American.

The Mistletoe.

The mistletoe is a Druidical contribution to Christmas. It was held in great veneration by the Druids in ancient England, and the cutting of it was attended by sacrificing and feasting. With weird incantations the priest climbed the tree on which the mistletoe grew and cut it away with a knife of purest gold, no base metal being allowed to touch it. As the twigs fell they were received below in a mantle of spotless whiteness.

Modest Greatness.

Reporter—Senator, to what do you chiefly attribute your successful career? Eminent Statesman—Entirely to heredity, young man. I deserve no credit for it whatever. My father had ambition, and my mother had talent, and I happened to inherit both those qualifications.—Chicago Tribune.

From Experience.

Mrs. Enpeck—I learned today that Bob Smith and Mary Jones were secretly married ten months ago. Just think of it! Married nearly a year and nobody the wiser! Mr. Enpeck—Oh, I don't know! I'll bet Smith was a whole lot wiser before he had been married a month.

PECAN SEAS- ON IS ON. Mexicans Engage in Work-Ranch- men Sell Nuts on Trees to Brokers.

Fort Worth, Tex.,—Several slight traces of early frost for the past ten days have put the pecans in condition to be gathered. Some pecan experts say the crop will be very light this year, while others persistently contend the crop will be quite heavy. Be that it may, there are some pecans on the trees along the rivers to be gathered and crews of pecan pickers are going to the groves and starting picking the nuts.

Each year there are whole families who make business of gathering pecans. They go into a large pasture along one of the rivers and spend several months, living in tents and wagons gathering nuts. They use large wagon sheets to catch the nuts as they are knocked from the trees. Sometimes the trees grow so close to the water that the nuts would fall in the stream were it not for some precautionary measure. Then it is that the expert gatherers show their hands. They cleverly stretch a piece of canvas so the nuts are caught in it instead of falling into the stream.

Many Mexicans gather pecans at this season of the year. They work under contract at so much per hundred pounds for the shelled nuts they deliver. The whole family is employed in the work, from the little children to the old grand-parents.

Many ranchmen who own large pastures along the rivers make a handsome profit each year off pecans. The crop is sold by them to a broker who puts his crews at work as soon as the proper time arrives. The ranchman instructs this broker to see that none of the limbs of the trees are broken, that fires are kept under control and that there is no promiscuous shooting so stock can be injured. Then the broker engages Mexicans to gather the nuts and the latter get their whole family busy at once.

In Danger of Forfeiting Respect.
"Come, Josiah," said Mrs. Gottfrid, after the waiter had gone for their salad, "hurry up and make a kick about something or they'll think we never eat in a first-class place before."

Population of the Continents.
Asia comprises 32 per cent. of the total land surface of the globe, and has a population of 820,000,000. America comprises 28 per cent., population, 125,000,000. Africa, 22 per cent., population, 130,000,000. Europe, 7 per cent., population, 380,000,000. Australia, 6 per cent., population, 5,000,000.

The American Cat-Tail.
The cat-tail of the American swamps is almost exactly the same plant as the Egyptian bulrush. It is no longer used for making paper, as it once was, but from its rot is prepared an astringent medicine, while its stems, when prepared dry, are excellent for the manufacture of mats, chair-bottoms and the like.

Reaching Life's Goal.
If you want to be somebody in this world you must assert your individuality and assert it in the right direction, so that it may lead to a goal of honor for yourself and be an example for others. Find out what you ought to do, say to yourself: "I must do it," then begin right away with "I will do it," and keep at it until it is done.

Perfect Faith.
He was a candidate for the ministry, and extremely anxious to pass. On being asked by his examining bishop to write out the Nicene creed he wrote with a faith entirely too vast: "I believe in all things, visible and invisible."

Ambiguous.
During the recent war maneuvers a private not long married received a letter from wife in which she asked: "Do you ever think of me, dear?" To which he is said to have replied: "I think of you every day at meals, darling. The cooking is horrible."—Boston Transcript.

Words and Verses in Bible.
There are 41,173 verses in the King James edition of the Bible, 33,214 in the Old and 7,959 in the New Testament. There are 774,746 words in the Bible, according to the figures of Horne, a Scotch student, who spent three years counting them.

On General Principles.
A little miss of five who had no brother and who did not like the boys at school who teased her, especially a boy named John, remarked at home: "I wish John was my boy. Do you know, if he belonged to me, I'd lick him whether he needed it or not."—Exchange.

For the Good of Humanity.
"I had a doctor in my car who had been called from a party to attend a dying man," was the defense of a motorist summoned the other day for exceeding the speed limit. The case was withdrawn.—Home Chat.

Wanted—An Interpreter.
It was a case of assault, and the literally downtrodden wife was laying her grievances before the magistrate. "He started by giving me a biff on the nut," explained the angry complainant. "My good woman," rebuked the magistrate, "you mustn't talk like that here. I suppose you mean he gave you a blow upon the head."

"Yus, yer washup! An' then 'e tried ter do me in by chuckin' 'is 'baccy box at me."

"By which I presume you mean," interposed the justice of the peace severely, "that he tried to injure you by precipitating his box of tobacco at you. Pray proceed and avoid slang and inform the court what other injuries he inflicted upon you."

"Well, then, he—er—he—"

"Come, come!" snapped the magistrate, really beginning to lose his temper. "Don't waste the time of the court."

The ill used wife looked about her helplessly.

"Excuse me, yer washup," she exclaimed at length, "but I was wonderin' what was the pet name in this 'ere court for a biff on the jib!"—London Answers.

Woman—and Her Master.
The philosopher and his friend sat far into the night discoursing on things in general and smoking strong shag. "Woman," said the former oracularly, "was meant to fill a subordinate position in the scheme of creation. Man is naturally her master. She cannot rationally oppose his will. He is instinctively and by the law of natural selection the dominant animal. Woman may learn to revolt, but she can never learn to rule. She has one mission in life—that of obedience. Man is born to lead, woman to follow. Man is born to command, woman to comply. She is secure only in her weakness. It is at once her duty and delight to obey her superior and—"

Then the door opened, and there appeared the head of a female thereat.

"Theophilus," said a stern voice, "how often have I told you not to smoke your horrid tobacco in the library? It's half past 2, sir. Come to bed instantly."

And the philosopher sighed, shook his friend silently by the hand and went.—London Sketch.

A Tempest in a Teapot.
What war was caused by a clay teapot?
For an answer to this question we must go, as might be supposed, to the land of pigstails and porcelain. The story goes that a Chinese emperor in olden days gave as a mark of special favor a magnificent clay teapot of rare design to Lo Hung Chang, his favorite mandarin. This was laid up as a priceless possession among the treasures of Lo Hung or borne at his side by two attendants at all high public festivals and functions. A rival mandarin saw these signs of distinction with the green eyes of jealousy and hired a man to break the obnoxious pot. The clumsy fellow was caught in the act and betrayed his master. War followed between the two mandarins and their respective followers, which resulted in the overthrow and death of Lo Hung Chang and the reception of his rival into royal favor in his place.

Soot on His Suit.
They were having a spelling lesson at a certain district school the other day, and the little scholars were all arranged in front of the teacher, spelling away for dear life, trying to see how near they could get to the head.

The word "chimney" was given out to a little black eyed girl who had been spelling words correctly throughout the morning, but she missed this one by inadvertently leaving out the "h."

Quick as a wink the little boy next her pounced on the word and spelled it correctly.

"You may go up one, Johnnie," said the teacher.

"I don't want to," whined Johnnie, getting ready to cry. "My mother would whip me if I did, because I'd get all over soot."—London Fun.

Might Have Been Put Differently.
We cut the announcement below from a New Zealand paper: "Notice.—The Maoris who are breeding pigs in Takahue, such as Mrs. Peter and Mr. Sam Yates, are supposed to look after their pigs and keep them away from rooting my paddocks, or else if they do not I shall shoot every pig I come across. Secretary L. Howell."

This is decidedly one of the things that might have been put differently.—Westminster Gazette.

On the Road to Learning.
"You say you know nothing at all about our railway?" said the official.

"Nothing whatever," answered the applicant for employment.

"Well, you come highly recommended. I suppose we'll have to put you in the bureau of information and let the traveling public educate you."—Washington Star.

Probably.
Myer—I wonder why Browne added the "e" to his name after inheriting a fortune? Gyer—He probably figures out to his own satisfaction that rich people are entitled to more ease than poor people.—London Globe.

The Water Jet.
The idea of driving piles with a water jet was borrowed by engineers from the clam, a small shellfish which burrows twelve to fourteen inches into hard sand or mud by this process.

He who lives in the spirit never grows old. The outward man perishes, but the inward man has a perpetual youth.—Phillips Brooks.

The Beggars of Madeira.
There is only one fly in the ointment of Madeira comfort—the beggars. They begin to beg before they can walk, and they call, "Penny! penny!" before they can list the sacred name of "mamma." However, one good thing has come of our experience with them. They have prepared us for beggars elsewhere. We are hardened, now—at least, we think we are. The savor of pity has gone out of us.—From "The Ship-Dwellers" by Albert Bigelow Paine, in the Outing Magazine.

Mr. Washburn's Inconstant Well.
Milton Washburn is having trouble with his well, which at first was giving a big supply of water. It began to blow a regular hurricane of wind up the hole at first, then it changed and blew down, after which the water gave out. Mr. Washburn will go down another hundred feet if necessary to get a sufficient supply of water.—Condon (Ore.) Times.

A Complete Disguise.
Little Jessie was very proud of her new coat and bonnet that her mamma had just bought for her. One day, not long afterward, she was going to visit her cousin. After marching around awhile with the new coat and bonnet on, she exclaimed: "O, Mamma, Dora won't know me, will she? She'll open the door and say: 'Why! Jappie Donneburger, who are you?'"—Delineator.

For Nervous Children.
A naturally nervous child, one who has been pampered, should early be taught self-control and the value of it. It is essential to discourage emotionalism and never contenance fits of temper. Plenty of fresh air and sunlight are great aids to naturally nervous children, and all rich foods should be forbidden.

Rest in Reclining.
You say you can rest as well sitting in a chair as resting on the bed. You may be resting, but just the same when you lie down you save your heart ten beats a minute, and that means a great deal to a nervous person, especially one who is subject to attacks of headache.

In Memory.
Of my darling daughter, Veola I. Brandon Westerfield, born Oct., 19th, 1868, united with Friendship church of Christ at the age of 12 years and was a faithful member until death, which occurred on the 22nd day of September, 1909, of a complication of diabetes and neuralgia of stomach and heart. She was married to Isaac A.

Westerfield June 28th, 1892. She was the mother of five children, three dying in infancy. Two daughters. Her loving mother preceded her to the spirit land nearly twelve years ago. She loved the church of Christ and was always found in her place except when sickness prevented. She had been in bad health for several years and when the brethren and sisters didn't see her in her place at church they knew she was sick. She loved the church of God and gave to its support. Mrs. Westerfield was the only child of Robert J. and Nancy M. Brandon. She had a baby brother that died at birth. She was carried by loving hands from her home to Friendship church where she loved to assemble and after services conducted by Rev. A. P. Kelley, assisted by Bro. J. S. Johnson, her remains were viewed by a large concourse of sorrowing friends and was laid to rest in Friendship Church Cemetery by the side of her loving mother to wait the resurrection when Christ will say come in you blest of my Father enter into the joys of everlasting life.

O, we miss you loving daughter,
Mother and wife;
We miss you in the home
That was so joyful and bright.

O all! is gloom and sorrow now
Our hearts are full of grief,
But we hope one day to meet you,
Where we shall never weep.

O! we miss you in the parlor,
We miss you in the hall,
We miss you at the table
When we offer thanks for all.

O! we miss you at the altar,
Where we kneel to God in prayer,
But we hope some day to meet you,
In a world that is free from care.

O! we meet you in that blessed region
Where death can never come,
In God's own time he calls us
From our home to your sweet home

To Sterilize Books.

A successful mechanical process for the sterilization of books has been recently devised in France, and a suggestion is being considered providing for the establishment of plants in different parts of the city for the regular treatment of the volumes used in schools.

A BARNUM TRICK.

Getting His Posters into Canada Without Paying Duty.

One of P. T. Barnum's most successful feats of bamboozlement was played upon the Canadian customs authorities. The veteran showman's tours were always planned far in advance, and one winter he made up his mind to take his great circus and menagerie through Canada during the summer after the next. This gave him about two years in which to mature his plans.

One important item of a showman's expenses consists of his advertising placards, and Mr. Barnum was always lavish with these gaudy prints. He was aware that the Canadian government imposed a high duty on this class of imports, and yet he wanted to paint Canada red, yellow, blue and green with a lavishness that no showman had ever displayed in that country before.

Now, there was no printing house anywhere in Canada that could begin to turn out the kind of work that Mr. Barnum required either in size, color or finish. Nevertheless his immense posters came under the same classification as much smaller lithographs and printed colored matter, and he knew that the Dominion custom authorities would not abate one jot of the full toll, but would rather rejoice at the opportunity to mulct the foreigner who would convey so much money out of a country.

So Barnum studied the question awhile and finally sent out at once a great lot of circus posters of the most gorgeous designs whereon yellow lions and clawed striped tigers and brown bears fought with blue hippopotamuses till gore flowed into beautiful crimson backgrounds. No agent appeared when the posters were detained by the Canadian customs officers to pay the duty. They were accordingly held for twelve months, then duly advertised for sale for three months more and finally put up at auction with a lot of other unclaimed parcels and were designated in the catalogue merely as "colored prints."

Nobody took any interest in them when the auctioneer called for a bid, and finally the whole batch was knocked down for a song to a secret agent of the circus who had been sent up by Mr. Barnum for that express purpose.

THE CROCODILE.

Terror of the Stealth of the Cunning Brute's Approach.

One of the reasons given by old writers for the crocodile being worshipped in Egypt was the somewhat cryptic one that it "laid threescore eggs and lived for threescore years," but from twenty to thirty is the common number of eggs found in a "clutch." In the reptile's easy code of ethics, however, its parental responsibilities end with the act of oviposition, for, having covered the eggs with a layer of sand, it leaves the sun to do the rest (whence doubtless Shakespeare's "your mud and the operation of your sun") and leaves it also to the ichneumon to do its worst. In some places it seems that water tortoises, too, eat crocodiles' eggs, but the ichneumon is the real desolator of crocodile homes, scratching up the nests and eating or breaking the entire "sitting" at a meal. Crocodiles' eggs, however, are absurdly small, a mother twenty feet long being content with an egg no larger than that of a goose, and the newly hatched young, hardly more formidable than a common newt, are preyed upon by birds, which a little later the rapidly growing crocodile would like nothing better than to get within its reach as well as doubtless by many other things, including old crocodiles themselves.

The real horror of the members of the crocodile tribe lies in their usual noiselessness. "They swim with great silence, making scarcely even a ripple on the water," says M. du Chailu, and the terror of the stealth of their approach is well conveyed in Rudyard Kipling's "Ripple Song":

"Wait, ah, wait," the ripple saith.
"Maiden, wait, for I am Death!"
—London Times.

"The Fault of the Dutch." It was to Sir Charles Bagot, minister at The Hague, that Canning in the course of a tariff dispute with Falk, the Dutch premier, addressed his famous dispatch in verse, which, as we have seen it wrongly quoted on several occasions, we venture to append: In matters of commerce the fault of the Dutch

Is giving too little and asking too much. With equal advantage the French are content.
So we'll clap on Dutch bottoms at twenty per cent.
Twenty per cent.
Twenty per cent.
Nous frapperons Falk with twenty per cent.
—"Links With the Past."

A Real Consolation.

Little Molly's father can't quite see where Molly got her information. One day when her unmarried aunt was visiting at their house Molly became impressed with her aunt's solitary state. "Haven't you any husband, Aunt Molly?" she asked. Aunt Molly's pretended grief over the fact that she was husbandless was so real to Molly that she undertook the task of consolation. "Never mind, dear Aunt Molly, husbands scold."—Delineator.

His Neighbor.

"We are told, Tommy," said the Sunday school teacher, "that we should love our neighbor. Now, who is your neighbor, Tommy?" But Tommy Tucker merely blushed, hung his head and said nothing. He didn't want to tell the little girl's name. —Chicago Tribune.

Stone Cake.

In very unusual seasons the people of Rajputan, in India, are deprived of seeds and succulent roots of grasses. Under these very adverse conditions the barks of trees and even ground up rocks are resorted to principally to give bulk to the scanty meal and thereby to stay the pangs of hunger for a longer time. A soft stone found on the Bikanir-Marwar border of Jaipur is largely used in that part of the country to give bulk to the meager meal. This stone is friable and easily ground into fine powder. It contains an oleaginous substance which has some nutritive qualities, and the people have found that when finely ground and used in proportions of about one-fourth to three-fourths of flour it does not impair digestion for a considerable time.

Not Much by the Day.

Lady—What! Thirty-eight cents a dozen for eggs! Why, that's more than 3 cents for one egg. Grocer—Well, mum, you must remember that one egg is a whole day's work for one hen. —Cleveland Leader.

Revolver Needed.

John—I'll bring you a fork, sir. The Customer—What for? John—The cheese, sir. The Customer—A fork's no good. Bring a revolver.—London Sketch.

Just the Same.

"What is your name?" asked the judge of the prisoner.
"Casey, yer honor," answered the prisoner.

"Your full name?" asked the judge.
"Just the same, yer honor," answered the prisoner, "full or sober."—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Outcome.

Jack—Where is the pretty girl you were making love to a year ago?
Tom—Oh, she's married long ago.

"Jilted you, eh?"
"No; worse than that. She married me."

The Crisis.

"Now, Tommy, you must go and wash yourself."

"Ma, if you keep on at this washin' business you'll queer me whole vacation."—Century Magazine.

Men's lives are as thoroughly blended with each other as the air they breathe.—Elliot.

THE BISHOP STAYED.

He Risked a Row, but Didn't Have to Leave His Bed.

The bishop of a southern diocese was once making a missionary journey through Arkansas and the Indian Territory, and on his arrival at Natchez he said to the landlord of a hotel, "I have been traveling for a week, day and night, in a wall wagon, and I want a comfortable room."

"Sorry," said the landlord, "but I don't believe there's a vacant room in Natchez. There's a horse race, a Methodist conference and a political convention in the city, and every house is full up. The only thing I can give you is a shakedown." Then, observing the bishop's tired face, he added: "The best room in my house is rented to a noted gambler, who usually remains out all night and seldom gets in before breakfast. If you will take the risk you shall have his room, but if he should come in there'll be a row, I'll promise you that."

The bishop decided to take the risk. About 4 o'clock in the morning the gambler returned and promptly shook the bishop by the arm.

"Get out of here or I'll put you out!" he shouted.

The bishop, the gentlest of men, raised himself on one elbow so that it brought the muscles of his arm into full relief.

"My friend," he began quietly, "before you put me out will you have the kindness to feel of my arm?"

The gambler put his hand on the bishop's arm.

"Stranger," he then said respectfully, "you can stay."—Youth's Companion.

KEENLY INTERESTED.

Lincoln's Question After the Committeeman Had Finished.

Just after the second battle of Bull Run the Boston chamber of commerce decided that President Lincoln was not prosecuting the war with enough celerity to conserve the interests of business, and so it appointed a committee to go to Washington and remonstrate with him upon his dilatory tactics. The committee was headed by a Mr. Pierce.

"We found," he said, "a man who looked as if he had lost all the friends he ever had in the world, who invited us to take seats and inquired our business. As I was the spokesman, I opened our case, and as I proceeded the president's face relaxed. By and by he smiled and betrayed actual interest, and by the time I concluded he was almost in a broad grin. After I had finished he inquired if that was all I had to say, and on my saying that I thought it was he asked if some of the other gentlemen wouldn't like to say something. They replied that they thought I had fully covered the ground. And then," continued Mr. Pierce, "what do you suppose this solemn man did? Well, he just moved his chair over to mine, smoothed his trousers over his knee, then reached over and smoothed mine down, too, and then, with a queer look, which none of us will ever forget, he said, 'Mr. Pierce, did you ever notice what a difference there is in legs?' "What did we do? We grabbed our hats and took the first train for Boston, and we never dared to report!"—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Carbuncle.

Carbuncles, to which the ancients attributed fantastic properties, were in reality rubies. They served, it was said, to give light to large serpents or dragons whose sight had been enfeebled by age. They bore them constantly between their teeth and laid them down only for eating and drinking. It was even claimed that the carbuncle emitted light in darkness and that the thickest clothing could not stop its rays. Without all the exaggeration of such legends it was believed for a long time that rubies contained luminous rays. The truth is that they have double refraction and send out the red rays with unequalled brilliancy. Traversed in a vacuum by an electric current, they are illuminated with a red fire of extreme intensity. The greatest heat does not change their form or their color.

Old Days on the Stage.

I have known a dress coat banded from one to another in the wings several times during a performance. It was a current idea that white cotton stockings assumed the appearance of silk from the front by making a heavy line of white chalk on the shin bone. A white tie was easily made from a strip of note paper, and even a shirt front could be managed from highly glazed note paper. White cotton gloves were de rigueur in place of the more expensive kid ones. A comediant, having no black stockings, once blacked his legs. After the show he asked the stage manager, "Do we play this piece again?" "Yes; next week." "Oh, then I need not wash my legs!"—From "Ramblings of an Old Mummer," by Russell Crauford.

Might Have Been Worse.

"Poor bye!" exclaimed O'Hara, con- doling with Cassidy, who had been injured by a blast. "Tis tough luck to hav yer hand blowed off." "Och! Faith, it might 'ave bin worse," replied Cassidy. "Suppose O'd had me week's wages in it at the same."

His Specialty.

"That clerk of yours seems to be a hard worker." "Yes, that's his specialty." "What—working?" "No. Seeming to."—Boston Transcript.

Regrets to Leave Fortune Behind.

Glasgow, Ky., Oct. 30.—Surrounded by wealth, though never having known luxury, Willis P. Bush, ex-Confederate soldier, aged seventy-five died at the home of a friend near Glasgow Junction, where he had gone to renew a note which he held.

Judge Bush, as he was called by many, was indeed a peculiar man in every sense of the word. He was what the people termed a miser, and, regardless of the fact that his wealth was estimated at from $25,000 to $50,000, he was never known to have worn a suit of clothes that was even passable.

He had no home but went from place to place, staying with his tenants, debtors, relatives and friends as long as they would keep him without charge, but the moment it was intimated that he should pay board, he left for more congenial quarters.

He served as a member of the Fiscal Court of this county several years ago, and later as Police Judge of Cave City, which gave him the title of Judge. It is claimed by those who knew him best that his average expenses have not exceeded $10 a year—even that much—for the past twenty-five years.

His whole soul seemed centered on making money and how to keep from spending it. He was a keen, shrewd business man, well up in law, and of the many loans made by him he seldom made a mistake.

He owned two old jennets, and while a member of the Fiscal Court he rode one of these animals to town, using rope stirrups and a piece of an old saddle. His clothes in summer consisted of a pair of old cottonade pants, linen coat, a hickory shirt and a ten-cent straw hat, which lasted a whole season.

He had been subject to heart trouble for several years, and his chief concern seemed to be his inability to take his money with him when he died. So far as known he left no will.
